

The Standard

London's hottest interior designers: the names you need to know when planning your home makeover

An interior designer will guide your style choices and help you avoid renovator's remorse. Olivia Lidbury finds London's top names to know now

OLIVIA LIDBURY
15 JUNE 2023

Hiring an interior designer sounds like the ultimate extravagance in these straitened times.

But for a unique home unaffected by the latest Instagram trends, and to avoid the renovators' remorse ('Should have done this! Could have done that!'), an expert holding your hand can save you from making potentially expensive mishaps in the long run. And in London, there are studios to tickle everyone's tastes.

Do note: some of the more established designers will only consider full revamps, but others will happily macro on a single space (their input for kitchens and bathrooms is especially worth its weight in gold).

SHENTON AND KENDLER OF STUDIOMICA

WILL PRYOE

The team behind the contemporary and cultured interiors of Nobu Shoreditch also do a mean line in residential projects.

In an east London penthouse, the living room is as photogenic — and opulent — as a hotel lobby. Clients span London, Ibiza and Kent, as Studiomica also has an outpost in hip-and-happening Margate.

studiomica.co.uk; @studio_mica